The Ugly Duckling

One day, a mother duck had a three ducklings. Two came out cute, fluffy, and yellow. The other came out gray and ugly. The ducklings laughed and made fun of the ugly duckling. The mother duck was even mean to it, too. The ugly duckling ran away from its family. It found a new farm to live at with a farmer, his wife, and a few geese, but they eventually got mean to the duckling as well. So the ugly duckling continued to leave in search of a family that would accept it. One day, the ugly duckling happened upon a lake with beautiful white birds. They were all floating in a pond when the ugly duckling walked over to them. The mother swam to the ugly duckling and invited it into the pond with them. When the duckling walked to the edge of the pond, it looked down and saw its reflection. It was no longer gray and ugly. It was now a beautiful white swan.

The Frog With No Legs

In the pond, there lived frogs, fish, and other reptiles and amphibians. Tanner was a brand new tadpole in the pond. He swam around as quickly as he could, but needed a new friend. He swam up to older frogs in the pond and tried talking to them. They all laughed at him and said he couldn't hang out with them because he didn't have any legs. He then swam to a turtle, who also said he was a frog with no legs, so he couldn't keep up with him either. The frog just swam around with the fish in the pond, feeling out of place. After days and days of feeling alone and sad, the frog felt his body start to change. He noticed that he was starting to grow two back legs, which was weird because he felt like he had been a fish. Two more days passed and he sprouted front legs, too. He swam over to the grown frogs that turned him away the other day and showed off his new legs. They apologized and said he could hang with them now.

The Swimming Champ

Tomo trained every day in the town swimming pool. The other kids splashed and floated happily as Tomo easily swam laps through the water. He wanted to be a swimming champ, starting with the swim meet coming up.

"Come on, Champ!" Jake called eagerly to Tomo.
"Let's dive off the board at the same time."

Tomo waved, but kept swimming. Jake did a belly flop off the board. SPLASH! Suddenly, Tomo saw that Jake was struggling for air. Unfortunately, the lifeguard was looking the other way. Tomo yelled to her for help. She jumped in the pool and helped Jake safely get to the side.

"Thanks, Tomo," said Jake. "I think you'll be a really great swimming champ someday."

"I just changed my mind," said Tomo proudly.

"Becoming a lifeguard would really be the greatest!"

The Best Goalie

Stacy Sloth wanted to play soccer. Most soccer players run swiftly and kick the ball strongly. But Stacy moved slowly and slept deeply.

"Hurry, Stacy! Run for the ball!" Charlie Cheetah yelled loudly. Stacy Sloth tried, but she could not run quickly.

At the first game, Stacy Sloth had an idea. She stood tiredly in the goal box. But when she yawned and stretched lazily, she blocked the ball! Then she went to sleep, turned over dreamily, and blocked the ball again!

She snored happily through the game. Her snores upset the other team. They played poorly. Stacy's team scored the winning goal!

"You are the best goalie ever," said Charlie Cheetah excitedly. And Stacy Sloth yawned proudly.
