Some of the services provided include: referral to outpatient and inpatient crisis stabilization facilities, referral to residential facilities for independent living, assisted living, or respite care, and referral to case management teams. There are also peer support services and rehabilitation groups, PT, OT, ST therapy, and financial assistance programs. Transportation may be provided to qualifying patients in order to attend necessary community activities and resources. Medical equipment and vehicular adaptation programs also exist. Housing vouchers are given to qualifying persons with serious and persistent mental illnesses in order to support families with housing (only for patients who do not qualify for HUD voucher or other benefits). This is done through the Georgia Housing Voucher Program.
