"IB Spotlight: Inspirational Figures embodying Learner Profile Traits"

César Chávez, a champion of workers' rights and social justice, truly embodies the IB learner profile trait of caring. His quote, "We cannot seek achievement for ourselves and forget about progress and prosperity for our community," reflects his deep commitment to the well-being of others. Chávez understood that real success comes from uplifting not just ourselves but everyone around us, especially the marginalized. His life's work in advocating for farmworkers' rights reminds us of the importance of empathy, compassion, and responsibility to our communities, values we strive to cultivate in our students at Copeland Elementary as part of the IB PYP.

Copeland Elementary is an IB World School. What does that actually mean?

What exactly is an IB school?

An IB school focuses more on the student rather than just good grades. Of course we want all of our students to receive good grades. However, we focus on our students' growth, not just as a student, but as a citizen. We aim to develop every student's skills that will allow them to be successful both in school and in life. So, it's different from a traditional school where they focus solely on students making good grades. We focus on grades as well as developing them to become lifelong learners and problem solvers.

Internationally Mindedness

Discover the essence of global citizenship through the IB Learner Profile! These attributes, such as being principled, open-minded, and reflective, lay the foundation for international mindedness. We teach these qualities not just as academic ideals, but as life skills that empower students to navigate an interconnected world with empathy and understanding. By embracing the IB Learner Profile, we aim to cultivate well-rounded individuals who contribute positively to our diverse global community.
